

8 Write your essay.

Exam tip!

- Introduction
  - First paragraph: negative points
  - Second paragraph: positive points
  - Conclusion
- There is more than one way to organise your answer. Try this option too:

|  |               |                |
|--|---------------|----------------|
| Paragraphs   | Content notes | Useful phrases |
| Introduction (give examples of the digital generation) |               |                |
| First point of view and opposing point of view         |               |                |
| Second point of view and opposing point of view        |               |                |
| Third point of view and opposing point of view         |               |                |
| Conclusion: stating your final point of view           |               |                |

Notes

Do you agree?

Young people live in a world which is increasingly connected, but many of them fail to really communicate.

EXAM TASK

In your English class you have been talking about the digital generation. Now your teacher has asked you to write an essay.

7 Read the exam task and look at the essay plan. Make notes for each section using the information in this activity and your own ideas. Include phrases you can use to contrast and add further points.

- a) Moreover, ...
- b) Although, ...
- c) Above all, ...
- d) On the contrary, ...
- e) In fact, ...
- f) Similarly, ...
- g) ..., though.

6 Look at the phrases below. Mark them C (used to signal a contrasting point of view) or A (used to signal an additional point).
